Migratory movements and diasporic communities

Introduction: there is large number of diasporic communities in countries such as the United Kingdom the United States and Canada. There are often first or second generation immigrants , but they still identify with the Caribbean, through culture, music and food . In the 19th century Caribbean persons went to areas such as Panama, to work on the Panama Canal, and then settled there . Today persons leave the Caribbean in search of better employment opportunities . Click Here for a more detailed analysis of the possible economic significance of the diaspora.

The video below is a short presentation about the diaspora
