

Caribbean influences on Extra-regional countries

The Caribbean people have created political issues due the fact that the Caribbean people have migrated to the countries of North America , the region of Europe, especially the United Kingdom . This migration had led to a new demography in these territories . The state of Florida in the United States is home to many Cuban, Jamaican and Haitian migrants . Below is a series of videos , website links and slides that show the immense influence of the Caribbean on extra-regional authorities .

When one looks at Cuba , Florida is home to thousands of Cubans , and even though there have been a thawing of relations between Cuba and the U.S.A. Cubans have always seen the United States has an area where they could migrate to. Since the middle of the 20th century millions of Caribbean people have migrated to the United States . For a statistical view of the numbers , Click Here . The fact that Cuba is less than 90 miles from the most southern part of Florida, also facilitates migration. For further information on the impact of Cubans in Florida, Click Here and also Here .

Apart from Cuba, the Jamaican,Trinidad, Haitian and Dominican Republic people have had a large influence on the United States . An example of this are event such as the West Indian parade in Brooklyn and the Caribbean Festival in Hollywood , Florida in 2015 that celebrated Caribbean culture . The video below is a extract from the one that was staged in 2015.

<https://www.migrationpolicy.org/article/caribbean-immigrants-united-states>

<https://www.everyculture.com/multi/Bu-Dr/Cuban-Americans.html>

<https://www.npr.org/2015/10/01/444912593/when-cuban-migrants-flooded-miami-what-did-it-do-to-the-local-economy>